

Caring that feels right at home.

There's no place like homecare.

Tell Congress to preserve home medical equipment and services in Medicare.

Homecare provides cost-effective comfort for eight million seniors and people with disabilities who depend on home medical equipment and services like oxygen therapy, power wheelchairs, hospital beds and diabetic supplies.

Homecare represents the smallest slice of the Medicare budget – and homecare holds down Medicare costs better than other healthcare segments. Yet it's a convenient target in Washington. Some critics over-simplify the price that Medicare pays for this benefit and compare it to a simple equipment purchase over the Internet. Home medical care and equipment will continue to be safe and cost-effective only as long as policymakers remember that homecare requires services and personal attention. For more information about homecare, visit www.aahomecare.org/athome.
